

GIG

Turn him out again, you unnecessary, useless, giddybrained as!

GIDDYHEADED, adj. [giddy and head.] Without thought or caution; without steadiness or constancy.
And sooner may a gulling weather spy,
By drawing forth heav'n's scheme delect
What fashion'd hats or ruffs, or suits, next year,
Our giddyheaded antick youth will wear.
That men are so misaffected, melancholy, giddyheaded, hear the testimony of Solomon.
GIDDYPACED, adj. [giddy and pace.] Moving without regularity.
More than light airs, and recollected terms,
Of these most brisk and giddypaced times.
GIER-EAGLE, n. f. [Sometimes it is written jer-eagle.] An eagle of a particular kind.
These fowls shall not be eaten; the swan and the pelican, and the gier-eagle.
GIFT, n. f. [from give.]
1. A thing given or bestowed; something conferred without price.
They presented unto him gifts, gold, and frankincense and myrrh.
Recall your gift, for I your pow'r confess;
But first take back my life, a gift that's less.
2. The act of giving.
No man has any antecedent right or claim to that which comes to him by free gift.
3. Oblation; offering.
Many nations shall come with gifts in their hands, even gifts to the king of heaven.
4. A bribe.
Thou shalt not wrest judgment, thou shalt not respect persons, neither take a gift; for a gift doth blind the eyes of the wife.
5. Power; faculty.
And if the boy have not a woman's gift,
To rain a shower of commanded tears,
An onion will do well for such a shift.
He who has the gift of ridicule, finds fault with any thing that gives him an opportunity of exerting his beloved talent.
GIFTED, adj. [from gift.]
1. Given; bestowed.
Made of my enemies the scorn and gaze,
To grind in brazen fetters, under task,
With my heav'n gifted strength.
2. Endowed with extraordinary powers. It is commonly used ironically.
Two of their gifted brotherhood, Hacket and Coppinger, got up into a pease-cart, and harangued the people to dispose them to an insurrection.
There is no talent so pernicious as eloquence, to those who have it not under command: women, who are so liberally gifted by nature in this particular, ought to study the rules of female oratory.
GIG, n. f. [Etymology uncertain.]
1. Any thing that is whirled round in play.
Playthings, as tops, gigs, battledores, should be procured them.
2. [Gigia, Icelandic.] A fiddle. Now out of use.
GIGANTICK, adj. [gigantes, Latin.] Suitable to a giant;
big; bulky; enormous; likewise wicked; atrocious.
Others from the wall defend
With dart and jav'lin, stones, and sulphurous fire;
On each hand slaughter and gigantick deeds!
I dread him not, nor all his giant-brood,
Though fame divulg'd him father of five sons,
All of gigantick size, Goliath chief.
The son of Hercules he justly seems,
By his broad shoulders and gigantick limbs.
The Cyclopean race in arms arose;
A lawless nation of gigantick foes.
To GYGGLE, v. n. [gichelen, Dutch.] To laugh idly; to titter; to grin with merry levity. It is retained in Scotland.
GIGGLER, n. f. [from giggle.] A laugher; a titterer; one idly and foolishly merry.
A sad wife valour is the brave complexion,
That leads the van, and swallows up the cities:
The giggler is a milk-maid, whom infection,
Or the fir'd beacon, frighteth from his ditties.
We shew our present, joking, giggling race;
True joy consists in gravity and grace.
GIGLET, n. f. [geazl, Saxon; geyl, Dutch; gillet, Scottish, is still retained.] A wanton; a lascivious girl. Now out of use.
Young Talbot was not born
To be the pillage of a giglet wench.
The fam'd Castibellan was once at point,
Oh giglet fortune! to master Cæsar's sword.
Away with those giglets too, and with the other confederate companion.

GIL

GIGLOT, n. f. [French.] The hip joint.
To GILD, v. a. pret. gilded, or gilt. [gilban, Saxon.]
1. To wash over with gold; to cover with foliated gold.
The room was large and wide,
As it some gilt or solemn temple were:
Many great golden pillars did appear
The mazy roof, and riches huge sustain.
Gilded wood may worms infold.
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
And the gilded ear of day,
His glowing axle doth allay
In the steep Atlantick stream.
Purchasing riches with our time and care,
We lose our freedom in a gilded snare.
When Britain, looking with a just disdain
Upon this gilded majesty of Spain,
And knowing well that empire must decline,
To whose chief support and sinews are of coin.
Her joy in gilded chariots, when alive;
And love of ombre after death survives.
2. To cover with any yellow matter.
Thou didst drink
The stale of horses and the gilded puddle,
Which beasts would cough at.
3. To adorn with lustre.
No more the rising sun shall gild the morn,
Nor evening Cynthia fill her silver horn.
4. To brighten; to illuminate.
The lightsome passion of joy was not that trivial, vanishing, superficial thing, that only gilds the apprehension and plays upon the surface of the soul.
5. To recommend by adventitious ornaments.
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace,
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.
Yet, oh! th' imperfect piece moves more delight;
'Tis gilded o'er with youth, to catch the sight.
1. One who lays gold on the surface of any other body.
Gilders use to have a piece of gold in their mouth, to draw the spirits of the quicksilver.
We have here a gilder, with his anvil and hammer.
2. A coin, from one shilling and sixpence, to two shillings.
To Persia, and want gilders for my voyage.
GILDING, n. f. [from gild.] Gold laid on any surface by way of ornament.
Silvering will fully and canker more than gilding, which, if it might be corrected with a little mixture of gold, there is profit.
The church of the Annunciation, all but one corner of it, is covered with statues, gilding, and paint.
Could laureate Dryden Pimp and Fry'r engage,
And I not strip the gilding off a knave,
Unplac'd, unpension'd, no man's heir or slave?
1. The apertures at each side of a fish's head.
The leviathan,
Stretch'd like a promontory, sleeps or swims,
And seems a moving land; and at his gills
Draws in, and at his trunk spouts out a sea.
Fishes perform their respiration under water by the gills.
He hath, on the bottom of his sides, two gill-fins; not behind the gills, as in most fishes, but for a good part before them.
Till they, of farther passage quite bereft,
Were in the maw with gills entangl'd left.
2. The flaps that hang below the beak of a fowl.
The turkeycock hath great and swelling gills, and the hen hath less.
3. The flesh under the chin.
In many there is no paleness at all; but, contrariwise, redness about the cheeks and gills, which is by the fending forth of spirits in an appetite to revenge.
Like the long bag of flesh hanging down from the gills of the people in Piedmont.
4. [Gilla, barbarous Latin.] A measure of liquids containing the fourth part of a pint.
Every bottle must be rinsed with wine: some, out of mistaken thrift, will rinse a dozen with the same: change the wine at every second bottle: a gill may be enough.
5. [From gillian, the old English way of writing Julian, or Juliana.] The appellation of a woman in ludicrous language.
I can, for I will,
Here at Burley o' th' Hill,
Give you all your fill,
Each Jack with his Gill.

GIN

6. The name of a plant; ground-ivy.
7. Malt liquor medicated with ground-ivy.
GILLHOUSE, n. f. [gill and house.] A house where gill is fold.
These shall each alehouse, these each gillhouse mourn,
And answ'ring ginshops fourer sighs return.
GILLYFLOWER, n. f. [Either corrupted from July flower, or from ginsfle, French.]
Gillyflowers, or rather Julyflowers, so called from the month they blow in, are of a very great variety; but they may be reduced to these sorts: red and white, purple and white, scarlet and white, the various kinds of which are too many to enumerate.
In July come gillyflowers of all varieties.
Fair is the gillyflower of gardens sweet,
Fair is the marygold, for pottage meet.
GILT, n. f. [from gild.] Golden shew; gold laid on the surface of any matter.
Our gaineys and our gilt are all befinch'd,
With rainy marching in the painful field.
When thou wast in thy gilt, and thy perfume, they mockt thee for too much curiosity: in thy rags thou know'st none, but art despis'd for the contrary.
The double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off.
GILT, The participle of GILD, which see.
Where the gilt chariot never mark'd its way.
GILTHEAD, n. f. [gilt and head.] A fish.
GILT-TAIL, n. f. [gilt and tail.] A worm so called from his yellow tail.
GIM, adj. [An old word.] Neat; spruce; well dressed.
GIMCRACK, n. f. [Supposed by Skinner to be ludicrously formed from gin, derived from engine.] A slight or trivial mechanism.
For though these gimcracks were away,
However, more reduc'd and plain,
The watch would still a watch remain;
But if the horal orbic ceases,
The whole stands still, or breaks to pieces.
What's the meaning of all these trankants and gim-cracks? What, in the name of wonder, are you going about, jumping over my master's hedges, and running your lines cross his grounds?
GIMLET, n. f. [giblet, gimblet, French.] A borer with a screw at its point.
The gimlet hath a worm at the end of its bit.
GIMMAL, n. f. [Supposed by Skinner and Anstworth to be derived from gimmel, Latin, and to be used only of something consisting of correspondent parts, or double. It seems rather to be gradually corrupted from geometry or geometrical.] Some little quaint devices or pieces of machinery.
I think by some odd gimmals or device
Their arms are set like clocks, still to strike on,
Else they could not hold out so as they do.
GIMMER, n. f. [See GIMMAL.] Movement; machinery.
The holding together of the parts of matter has so confounded me, that I have been prone to conclude with myself, that the gimmers of the world hold together not so much by geometry as some natural magick.
GIMP, n. f. [See GIM.] Gimp, in old English, is neat, spruce;
A kind of silk twist or lace.
GIN, n. f. [from engine.]
1. A trap; a snare.
As the day begins,
With twenty gins we will the small birds take,
And pasture make.
Which two, through treason and deceitful gin,
Hath slain fir Mordant.
So drives the woodcock with the gin;
So doth the cony struggle in the net.
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtilty,
If those, who have but sense, can shun
The engines that have them annoy'd;
Little for me had reason done,
If I could not thy gins avoid.
I know thy trains,
Though dearly to my cost, thy gins and toils;
No more on me have pow'r, their force is null'd.
He made a planetary gin,
Which rats would run their own heads in,
And come on purpose to be taken,
Without d' expense of cheese and bacon.
Keep from flaying fougure thy skin,
And ankle free from iron gin.
2. Any thing moved with screws, as an engine of torture.
Typhæus joints were stretched on a gin.
3. A pump worked by rotatory sails.
A bituminous plate, alternately yellow and black, formed by water dwelling on the outside of the gin pump of Moftyn coalpits.
4. [Contracted from GENEVA, which see.] The spirit drawn by distillation from juniper berries.

GIP

This calls the church to deprecate our sin,
And hurls the thunder of our laws on gin.
Thee shall each alehouse, thee each gillhouse mourn,
And answ'ring ginshops fourer sighs return.
GINGER, n. f. [zingiber, Latin; gingera, Italian.]
The flower consists of five leaves, which are shaped somewhat like those of the iris: these are produced in an head or club, each coming out of a separate leafy scale. The ovary afterwards becomes a triangular fruit, having three cells which contain their seeds.
The root of ginger is of the tuberous kind, knotty, crooked and irregular; of a hot, acrid, and pungent taste, though aromatick, and of a very agreeable smell. The Indians eat both the young shoots of the leaves and the roots themselves, cut small in their salads, and make an excellent sweetmeat of them. Ginger is an excellent carminative and stomachick.
Or wafting ginger round the streets to go,
And visit alehouse where ye first did grow.
GINGERBREAD, n. f. [ginger and bread.] A kind of furinaceous sweetmeat made of dough, like that of bread or biscuit, sweetened with treacle, and flavoured with ginger and some other aromatick seeds. It is sometimes gilt.
An' I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread.
Her currans there and gooseberries were spread,
With the enticing gold of gingerbread.
'Tis a loss you are not here, to partake of three weeks froth, and eat gingerbread in a booth by a fire upon the Thames.
GINGERLY, adv. [I know not whence derived.] Cautiously, nicely.
What is't that you
Took up so gingerly?
GINGERNESS, n. f. Niceness; tenderness.
GINGIVAL, adj. [gingiva, Latin.] Belonging to the gums.
Whilst the Italians strive to cut a thread in their pronunciation between D and T, so to sweeten it, they make the occlude appulse, especially the gingival, softer than we do, giving a little of perverseness.
TO GINGLE, v. n.
1. To utter a sharp clattering noise; to utter a sharp noise in quick succession.
The foot grows black that was with dirt embrown'd,
And in thy pocket gingle halfpence found.
Once, we contend, beneath the patriot's cloak,
From the crack'd bag the dropping guinea spoke,
And gingle down the backstairs, told the crew,
Old Cato is as great a rogue as you.
2. To make an affected sound in periods or cadence.
TO GINGLE, v. a. To shake so that a sharp shrill clattering noise should be made.
Her infant grandame's whistle next it grew;
The bells the gingle'd, and the whistle blew.
GINGLE, n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A shrill resounding noise.
2. Affection in the sound of periods.
GINOLYMOID, adj. [gynolymos, and oid.] Resembling a ginglymus; approaching to a ginglymus.
The malleus lies along, fixed to the tympanum, and on the other end is joined to the incus by a double or ginglymid joint.
GINOLYMUS, n. f. [ginglime, French.] A mutual indenting of two bones into each other's cavity, of which the elbow is an instance.
GIPNET, n. f. [gipnet.] A nag; a mule; a degenerated breed. Hence, according to some, but I believe, erroneously, a Spanish gipnet, improperly written for gimnet.
GINSENG, n. f. [I suppose Chinense.] A root brought lately into Europe. It never grows to any great size, and is of a brownish colour on the outside, and somewhat yellowish within; and so pure and fine, that it seems almost transparent.
It is of a very agreeable and aromatick smell, though not very strong. Its taste is acrid and aromatick, and has somewhat bitter in it. We have it from China; and there is of it in the same latitudes in America. The Chinese value this root so highly, that it sells with them for three times its weight in silver. The Asiatics in general think the ginseng almost an universal medicine. The virtues most generally believed to be in it are those of a restorative, and a cordial.
The European physicians esteem it a good medicine in convulsions, vertiges, and all nervous complaints; and recommend it as one of the best restoratives known.
TO GIP, v. a. To take out the guts of herrings.
GIPSY, n. f. [Corrupted from Egyptian; for when they first appeared in Europe they declared, and perhaps truly, that they were driven from Egypt by the Turks. They are now mingled with all nations.]
1. A vagabond who pretends to foretell futurity, commonly by palmistry or physiognomy.
The butler, though he is sure to lose a knife, a fork, or a spoon every time his fortune is told him, shuts himself up in the
